The history of Villa Kreuzberg

In the years 1892/93 the "Villa Kreuzberg" was built by Hermann Blankenstein and Fritz Haack as part of the 160 hectare Viktoriapark. A machine house was needed for the operation of the waterfall and a gardener's house for the maintenance of the park.

The two-storey gardener's house, in red brick, was built in the Swiss country house style with an overhanging cross-roof, a balcony at the front and rich decorations. A pergola connects the gardener's house with the machine house behind it, a single-storey red clinker brick building which was erected according to the specifications of the waterworks. The pumps for the operation of the Kreuzberg waterfall are still to be found in the cellar.. Today the Villa Kreuzberg is listed as an individual monument.

The house has had many users throughout its long history. Originally it was the residence of the head gardener and his assistant before it was used by the green area office of the Kreuzberg district. Over the course of time, the villa has been a youth centre and a girls' centre. The hall in the machine house was used for concerts and other cultural events. Due to the strained financial situation of the district, the condition of the building deteriorated continuously until the district sold the villa to a property fund in 2002 due to lack of money.

The petting zoo adjacent to the villa is still run by an association.
